In 1900 the average American life expectancy was 47 years. Among the Amish then it was 70 years. Recent events around the globe show how our medical system works, and the profit motive that is so often at the centre of it. This highlights many of the Amish values in shunning this kind of world.

Recent studies have found that Amish health far outstrips those in the world around them in almost every category. Some now have high cardiovascular issues, but this is often because they no longer farm. These Amish often work in factories because they can no longer afford to buy farming land.

Some tips to their health are:

- They exercise in outdoor living and farming, shunning technology.
- They eat seasonally, what grows at that time of the year. This food is far more nutritional.
- They complement traditional medicine with local nutrition and local herbal traditions. They self-medicate.
- They believe that health comes from God, as does their family, their body and their communities, so they live well and care for each other.
- Their elderly live healthier than elderly outside their communities. This is because they live in families and are happier and less stressed, cared for by the community.
- They do not use health insurance, like the rest of America does. They pay cash for their hospital care, if needed. They get a discount because they pay all bills within 10 days. By contrast, it usually takes a hospital up to one year to have its bills paid by the national insurance bodies. The Amish community chips in together to pay for those in need. But if they decide the cost is above the benefit to the person, the person goes untreated.
- In contrast, a huge proportion of the American health care costs goes towards trying to keep elderly wealthy alive. Amish do not believe this is right use of money and they have faith in God.

Quoted from the attached study, we see the economic mobility that comes from medical pluralism: wealth is democratically located within the community, rather than extracted by centralised corporate powers.

Yale University Prof Epidemiology said HCQ cure for Covid-19 "In the future, I believe this misbegotten episode regarding hydroxychloroquine will be studied by sociologists of medicine as a classic example of how extra-scientific factors overrode clear-cut medical evidence."

"I myself know of two doctors who have saved the lives of hundreds of patients with these medications, but are now fighting state medical boards to save their licenses and reputations. The cases against them are completely without scientific merit."

"These seven studies (recent studies Prof looked at) include: an additional 400 high-risk patients treated by Dr. Vladimir Zelenko, with zero deaths; four studies totalling almost 500 high-risk patients treated in nursing homes and clinics across the U.S., with no deaths; a controlled trial of more than 700 high-risk patients in Brazil, with significantly reduced risk of hospitalization and two deaths among 334 patients treated with hydroxychloroquine; and another study of 398 matched patients in France, also with significantly reduced hospitalization risk. Since my letter was published, even more doctors have reported to me their completely successful use."

"In the northern Brazil state of Pará, COVID-19 deaths were increasing exponentially. On April 6, the public hospital network purchased 75,000 doses of azithromycin and 90,000 doses of hydroxychloroquine. Over the next few weeks, authorities began distributing these medications to infected individuals. Even though new cases continued to occur, on May 22 the death rate started to plummet and is now about one-eighth what it was at the peak."

"On May 27, the Swiss national government banned outpatient use of hydroxychloroquine for COVID-19. Around June 10, COVID-19 deaths increased four-fold and remained elevated. On June 11, the Swiss government revoked the ban, and on June 23 the death rate reverted to what it had been beforehand. People who die from COVID-19 live about three to five weeks from the start of symptoms, which makes the evidence of a causal relation in these experiments strong. Both episodes suggest that a combination of hydroxychloroquine and its companion medications reduces mortality and should be immediately adopted as the new standard of care in high-risk patients."

"Why has hydroxychloroquine been disregarded? First, as all know, the medication has become highly politicized..."

"Second, the drug has not been used properly in many studies... Even so, it has demonstrated significant benefit in large hospital studies in Michigan and New York City when started within the first 24 to 48 hours after admission... In fact, as inexpensive, oral and widely available medications, and a nutritional supplement, the combination of hydroxychloroquine, azithromycin or doxycycline, and zinc are well-suited for early treatment in the outpatient setting. The combination should be prescribed in high-risk patients immediately upon clinical suspicion of COVID-19 disease, without waiting for results of testing. Delays in waiting before starting the medications can reduce their efficacy..."

"Third, concerns have been raised by the FDA and others about risks of cardiac arrhythmia, especially when hydroxychloroquine is given in combination with azithromycin. The FDA based its comments on data in its FDA Adverse Event Reporting System. This reporting system captured up to a thousand cases of arrhythmias attributed to hydroxychloroquine use. In fact, the number is likely higher than that, since the reporting system, which requires physicians or patients to initiate contact with the FDA, appreciably undercounts drug side effects. But what the FDA did not announce is that these adverse events were generated from tens of millions of patient uses of hydroxychloroquine for long periods of time, often for the chronic treatment of lupus or rheumatoid arthritis. Even if the true rates of arrhythmia are ten-fold higher than those reported, the harms would be minuscule compared to the mortality occurring right now in inadequately treated high-risk COVID-19 patients. This fact is proven by an Oxford University study of more than 320,000 older patients taking both hydroxychloroquine and azithromycin, who had arrhythmia excess death rates of less than 9/100,000 users, as I discuss in my May 27 paper cited above. A new paper in the American Journal of Medicine by established cardiologists around the world fully agrees with this.”

“In the future, I believe this misbegotten episode regarding hydroxychloroquine will be studied by sociologists of medicine as a classic example of how extra-scientific factors overrode clear-cut medical evidence. But for now, reality demands a clear, scientific eye on the evidence and where it points. For the sake of high-risk patients, for the sake of our parents and grandparents, for the sake of the unemployed, for our economy and for our polity, especially those disproportionately affected, we must start treating immediately.”

Harvey A. Risch, MD, PhD, is professor of epidemiology at Yale School of Public Health.

I support doctors speaking the truth in public.

(This is not about the politics for me, but the patient and freedom of information for the patient's sake.)

This is not nearly forward enough. The Prof of Epidemiology of Yale University said thousands of people are dying who shouldn't be, because of the ban of HCQ.

We used to live in a free society where people were allowed to speak their professional opinion in public without being censored, threatened, maligned and punished.

Every company that makes all 72 mandated vaccines for American children is a convicted serial felon, criminal, for lying to doctors, falsifying the science, for killing hundreds of thousands of Americans knowingly.

Dr Fauci puts $500 million of tax payer funds into a Covid-19 vaccine for which he owns half of the patents. The vaccine had very limited tests, done only on a few of the most healthy people (and Americans in general are not healthy), a high proportion became very sick and were admitted to hospital. Now they are making 2 billion of these vaccines. What kind of society is this?

American congress receives twice the amount of money in lobbying gifts from pharmaceutical companies than from oil or gas, and much more than any other industry.

The FDA and the CDC rely on the vaccine industry for much of their budget. They are "vaccine companies." NIH owns hundreds of vaccine patents. Those who work in these "public bodies" profit personally from these patents. No independence in the industry. Those making the profits are regulating themselves. The head scientist of the CDC (Dr William Thompson) came out three years ago and said they had been ordered to fake the science on autism.

Cochrane is the highest authority on vaccine efficacy. Their most recent studies show that 1 in 100 flu vaccines are effective. This is after 100 years of fine-tuning flu vaccines. They said there is zero evidence that the flu shot prevents any hospitalizations or any deaths. They found instead that the flu shot "transmits the flu," meaning if you get the flu shot you are six times more likely to give someone else the flu. Cochrane found that people who take the flu shot are 4.4 times more likely to get a non-flu infection. The shot gives you pathogenic priming. It injures your immune system, so you are more likely to get a non-flu upper respiratory infection. A Pentagon study shows it primes you for coronavirus. Six other major studies show the same thing. "There are cases in which the flu shot would help, but to mandate it population wise, I think is criminal."

Roberts details with documents the unscientific corona vaccines now being produced.

I have recently looked a bit at Robert Kennedy Jr's profile. He is called an antivaxxer, but that isn't true. He is calling for independent and safe vaccines. Our opinions change as we learn more, but so far this is what I think. Robert was 9 when his uncle (JFK) was assassinated as president of America. When he was 13 his father was assassinated while running to become president. With all that privilege and trauma, I think Robert is doing well as an adult.

Most of Robert's adult career has been as a lawyer, training younger lawyers, while working with them against large companies and governments to secure the cleaning of Americas waterways. This work has been successful and has now grown globally. His environmentalism has been grounded in real issues. His work has not been self-serving, but has genuinely benefited the community and environment, and has forced bigger powers to also serve the common good. This is the kind of "philanthropy" I like, that is not profit seeking, but is genuine in serving. It is rare.

I think Robert brings this same motive to the vaccine matter. It is to curtail big business from harming people, to ensure they are accountable. He is not against vaccines. He says earlier vaccines were trusted in America because people trusted the health bodies. Today, the CDC is a business organisation, as is the WHO. The plain fact is people don't trust them. I certainly don't trust them. I would trust them if they were genuinely public bodies, with public accountability and with a group of experts working with them from across the board, all people who had no vested interests in the products or policies. Until that happens, I will not trust them. We are miles away from that today.

So, when it comes to them or Robert, I go with Robert for now. He is not an opportunist. It is a choice between one who serves others, and groups who serve themselves. Anyway, here on this video is a conversation about vaccines. I take no responsibility for possibly ridiculous adverts that interrupt the program.

In the David and Goliath debacles, I always go for David. On the issue of vaccines, they can be helpful, and this is why independence is so important for our society. If we don't get independence we will lose their benefit.

See below/ attached review of HCQ tests for covid-19 so far.

When a "fact-checker" says they are independent and that there is no evidence for hydroxychloroquine positive for covid, they claim they can say this because of one or two tests they are referring to. It's just industry talk. They know they are lying. Here are just some of the tests that have been done. There are more positive or highly positive tests. Yet they still speak as though these never happened, though they live on a different planet. It's like there is no one home. Though thousands have been made better and thousands of doctor claim highly beneficial results.

Yet they use largely misleading and false tests still to discipline doctors who put their patients first. It's a crime.

(By "misleading" I mean tests were done on late stage patients, or using incorrect doses, or not using associated required meds with the HCQ. By "fraudulent" I mean the data wasn't taken correctly, or was just invented out of thin air, like the infamous retracted Lancet report, that people still quote against HCQ.)

The foxes running the hen house. Insider trading. This is why they would want to shove the vaccine down our throats. And what does the government do? Fines people who don't have facemasks? Goes after the chickens. "Brave, brave, Sir Robin."

On Judy Mikovits who was in a movie called Plandemic. I haven't watched the movie. She also co-authored a book called the Plague of Corruption. I haven't looked at the book. Antivaxers follow her work. I have never had an interest in the antivax debate. Robert Kennedy junior is a whistle-blower on the vaccine industry. I have never followed his work.

But what I have done is listen to Judy on interviews she has given. I have listened to several since April. The science in them is well over my head. But my wife has a degree in microbiology, with a little work experience and she helps me to understand some of the language and concepts.

You put Judy's name into Google, and you get a list of people lining up to denounce her, from Wikipedia to all kinds of other people and fact-checkers. Many of these are sponsored by the industry Judy is critiquing, or its associate industries. Judy has nothing to benefit from this, but the maligning of her person and career. The people who denounce her have extremely significant special interest in the matter and most of them are completely unqualified to engage the science and experience she is speaking from. It's the same with the immunologist Prof Dolores Cahill. She makes all the same points as Judy. She is one of the highest qualified people in her field, working in stage 4 labs, in the Max Planck Institute and an advisor to governments. To me, both of these people are courageous. Dolores has also lost personally and professionally for coming out. Both these people are censored but are both highly qualified to speak.

What gets me is the gutlessness of the world we live in. We say there is no foul play afoot, yet we know if we speak up, we will encounter intimidation and censorship against ourselves and against our career and interests. So we know very well there is foul play afoot.

We are intimidated to wear masks for “the good of others” and yet a leading Professor from Yale University can say publicly that withholding hydroxychloroquine is due to both pharma and political corruption, and that this is costing between 75,000 and 100,000 lives in America. If this many lives can be saved, but are not, who is working in the best interests of others? The Association of American Physicians & Surgeons repeatedly calls upon the FDA and the HHS to allow the drug into treatment. Both Judy and Dolores (and thousands of other doctors) say this drug and other cheap meds work and should be used. Double-blind random tests in prestigious hospitals have confirmed this. Yet the WHO sponsors groups who lie about this, blatantly. Why is the expert opinion of so many people worth nothing, instead they are censored and slandered? Do we care for the common good here? This whole issue is hypocritical from start to finish, and I am expected to line up to support ineffective measures and condemn effective measures. I am grieved at the lack of backbone in this world.

To re-share from yesterday.

A lengthy interview with Dr Judy, who has been at the forefront in virus research for decades. She worked with Dr Fauci on the HIV virus in the 1980's, and many others.

Here she speaks of the problems presented when our increasing number of vaccines are made from animal cell lines, and necessarily include animal viruses, which are many, including coronaviruses. Judy was imprisoned for this and put under a gag order for years. She is now speaking. She says the western world cannot afford the indemnity coming from this. Condescending fact-checkers are not nearly as qualified as she.

She also claimed vaccines need to be cleaned up. She is not against them. But she adds we need to get our medicines from plant extracts, not from animals. Interestingly, the scriptures concur, in many places, including Revelation, “the leaves are for the healing of the nations,”

“Your kingdom come...”

Dr Judy has decades of research experience at the forefront in the central issues we are dealing with in the coronavirus. She is here briefly introduced and then answers questions very clearly. This particular presentation is very much worth listening to.

Article 6 of the United Nations Declaration on Bioethics and Human Rights which states:

"Any preventive, diagnostic and therapeutic medical intervention is only to be carried out with the prior, free and informed consent of the person concerned, based on adequate information. The consent should, where appropriate, be express and may be withdrawn by the person concerned at any time and for any reason without disadvantage or prejudice."

(The United Nations was an anti-Fascist corrective, and many policies it insisted upon were opposed to those adopted by the Nazi Party of Germany. The enforcement measures being carried out now in our societies are in contradiction to the reason for the establishment of the United Nations.)

As this article reiterates, a cytokine storm, which is an overreaction of the immune system, could result (as studies have shown) from an immunological response to a prior vaccination. The fact that in every place where large numbers of elderly died, that these elderly regions were supplied in large number with flu vaccine made from dog cell lines with coronavirus, this should be looked at with full independence.

"However, if they mandate that we must take their vaccine, once developed, trialled and deemed safe by the people who profit from it; if they refuse to acknowledge the appalling conflict of interest in the scientism they worship; if they won't listen to legitimate scientific concerns and deny all opportunities for rational debate and independent research; if they censor scientific evidence, and persist with their straw-man arguments and false appeals to faux authority; if they continue to deploy the meaningless labels, they have created, to marginalise anyone who dares criticise their vaccine cult, then we must inoculate ourselves against the crazy anti-rationalists."

"It's easy, we just ignore these zealots. And, if millions of us refuse to comply, there is absolutely nothing they can do about it."

Dr. Harvey Risch, an epidemiology professor at Yale School of Public Health, said on Tuesday that he thinks hydroxychloroquine could save 75,000 to 100,000 lives if the drug is widely used to treat coronavirus (in America).

No conspiracy of corruption of course, in the pharma or media...! Doctors suspended for this and other disagreements with approved line.

Just think of the number of lives.

A Moroccan scientists said up to 80% of European lives lost to Covid could have been save by the proper use of this drug.

A commercial empire controlled by propaganda

How easily the public mind is turned 126 deaths in Australia, no one can leave the nation, who knows for how long. Millions of jobs lost. Countless people affected. A virus is a virus. It spreads as soon as you open until it reaches herd immunity. It doesn't go away.

813 deaths in Nigeria's more than 200 million people. International borders locked down at least until October. All schools shut, who knows for how long. Kids losing a whole year and exams they have struggled to pay for. So many millions of others affected.

The propagandists are being paid and they look like they are doing it to help. And yet none of this effects them.

Have been saying this since April and have copped a lot of flack for it...

"A more infectious virus is less deadly.

It's good we have more cases, just protect the vulnerable.

We are likely heading to herd immunity already in places.

This herd immunity is a better hope than a vaccine."

So stop the lockdowns and the oppression of the community.

Another successfully tested medicine that had a high recovery rate for hospitalised Covid patients. Interferon beta.

I still can't understand why:

1. They don't quickly role out safe drugs they know work and allow doctors to use if someone is in danger of dying. Maybe this drug is widely used? If we have many different treatments, which tests and clinical usage show we do, why all the lockdowns? Lockdowns and masks both quickly reduce our immunity, making us all sicker.

2. How they can test drugs using a placebo group and allow those patients to die “for the sake of science.” This seems unethical to me. (It reminds me of the Princes Bride video, with the “gentleman” doing research on suffering subjects “for posterity.”) Maybe I’m not getting something. The good news is there have been some improvements since before WWII, when mentally ill people and other vulnerable people were widely used as guinea-pigs. It still happens today in poorer populations or populations with less government controls. The ethics of money-making have not changed. The presence of this ethic in our industry is concerning.

This doesn’t seem to me to be how doctoring should work, when treatment is urgently needed to save lives. That is, if a doctor assesses for his patient that there is a benefit-cost relationship for having a drug that is positive, their patient should get it on time. There should be no guinea-pigs.

1,500 private jets fly into the Davos Conference to hear David Attenborough speak on climate and global extinction.

They established the World Economic Forum and the Great Reset to save us from another crisis: the pandemic. This whole thing is a manipulated script.

If they want to “save the world:”

1. Close Monsanto and it’s cousins.
2. Close offshore tax havens and secret accounts.
4. Return stolen money to countries of origin.
5. Dismantle monopolies.
6. Decentralise wealth and power to local regions.

Epidemiologists

Director of Evidence Based Medicine

“We wanted to learn more about the current state of the pandemic and the direction it was headed. Joining Freddie Sayers was Prof Heneghan and his Centre for Evidence Based Medicine colleague Tom Jefferson who shared their thoughts in this wide-ranging discussion. Have a watch above, key quotes below...

“00:00 – Intro 2:55 – Masks • Tom Jefferson: “Aside from people who are exposed on the frontlines, there is no evidence that masks make any difference, but what’s even more extraordinary is the uncertainty: we don’t know if these things make any difference.... We should have done randomised control trials in February, March and April but not anymore because viral circulation is low and we will need huge number of enrolees to show whether there was any difference”.

“• Carl Heneghan: “By all means people can wear masks but they can’t say it’s an evidence-based decision... there is a real separation between an evidence-based decision and the opaque term that ‘we are being led by the science’, which isn’t the evidence”.

“9:26 – Pandemic life cycle • CH: “One of the keys of the infection is to look at who’s been infected, which shows a crucial difference when comparing the pandemic theory to seasonal theory. In a pandemic you’d expect to see young people disproportionately affected, but in the UK we’ve only had six child deaths, which is far less than we’d normally see in a pandemic. The high number of deaths with over-75s fits with the seasonal theory”.

“14:00 – Covid seasonality • CH: “The stability of the virus is far less when the temperature goes up but humidity seems to be particularly important. The lower the humidity, the more stable the virus is in the atmosphere and on surfaces... It’s now winter in the southern hemisphere, which is why places like Australia are suddenly having outbreaks.”

“20:37 – Lockdown • CH: “Many people said that we should have locked down earlier, but 50% of care homes developed outbreaks during the lockdown period so there are issues within the transmission of this virus that are not clear... Lockdown is a blunt tool and there needs to be intelligent conversations about what mitigation strategies can keep society functioning while we keep the most vulnerable shielded".

"25:20 – Nightingale hospitals • CH: "They are the wrong structure. What you need is fever hospitals which were here until around the 1980s or 90s. They were on single floors and had isolation within isolation. There were no lift shafts and staff were trained, which meant that everyone was protected from each other... It looks like at least 20% of people got the infection while they were in hospital"

"27:30 – Suppression strategy • CH: "The benefits of the current strategy are outweighed by the harms...When it comes to suppression, only the virus will have a determination in that. If you follow the New Zealand policy of suppressing it to zero and locking down the country forever, then you're going to have a problem... This virus is so out there now, I cannot see a strategy that makes suppression the viable option. The strategy right now should be how we learn to live with this virus"

"32:45 – Response to the virus • TJ: "I am a survivor of four pandemics and for the other three, I didn't even realise they were going on. People died but nothing changed and none of the fabric of society was eroded like this response... Do I see steps being taken at a European level about learning from our mistakes and changing policies? The answer is no..."

"39:30 – Politics of the virus • CH: "We as individuals are part of the problem because sensationalism drives people to click and read the information. So it's a big circle because we've created the problem — if we put the worst case scenario out there, we will go and have a look. If you want a solution, you've got to get people to stop clicking on this sensationalist stuff".

"43:30 – IFR • CH: "We will be down about where we were with the swine flu: around 0.1-0.3% which is much lower than what we think because at the moment we are seeing the case fatality". • TJ: "If you look at the whole narrative, it was distorted from the very beginning by the obsession with influenza which was just one or two agents and nothing else existed. We're no different now".

The way Covid deaths are recorded

Professor Carl Heneghan is Director of the Centre for Evidence Based Medicine at Oxford University, and has been paying close attention to the Covid-19 statistics. In a post yesterday evening he revealed an extraordinary detail: the Public Health England daily death totals announced to the media include anyone who has ever tested positive for Covid-19 — even if they recovered completely.

Key quotes:

- There was "massive confusion" about different Covid data between England's health bodies. "Public Health England figures are about double the ONS figures because PHE are reporting anybody who has had a positive Covid death in the past... This will get increasingly confusing as we go into the next Winter because there could be a new outbreak and new deaths while also still reporting on historical deaths... This is a problem for epidemiologists and media..."

- Even a "28 period cut-off is still not ideal for accurate death numbers because there is "immediate cause and underlying cause... Immediate cause means you've had Covid within 21 days but outside of that, it becomes the underlying cause — something that contributed to your death but wasn't a direct cause. A 21 day cut-off would be helpful because it gives a clearer understanding of that distinction"

- "We follow excess deaths which is the most accurate information about what's going on at that moment, but it can't tell you what those deaths are caused by" (i.e. people not coming forward with heart attacks etc)

- "There's an important distinction between lives lost and life years lost. One of the things we'll be watching very closely over the next six months is how many people would have actually died in the next six months... That's where the excess deaths really matter. If we start to see it trend significantly under for the next few months, we'll start to come forward with information that suggests there was a group of vulnerable people that any respiratory infection would have shortened their life."

- "In the media you'll always hear about catastrophe and the consequences of that. One of the things we notice is that when you don't hear anything that usually means there's good news happening. So when Sweden looks worse you hear about it but when it's not so bad, like now, you never see it in the media."

The non-democratic, dictatorial rule of the technocrats.

The technocracy has moved to the left.

In the 1890's America, the technocracy was the right wing, with monopolists like Rockefeller, where the common people were mocked as the popularists, those not fit to participate in democracy, or to participate in decision making. Not speaking of a racist populism, but a united democracy against minority oligarchy.

The technocrats in the 1950's were the bankers and scientists, who developed a new science and were running the Vietnam War by a computer model. That was a total failure. Elite failure happens all the time. These technocrats are supposedly "disinterested," but they always act in their own class interests.

Now the technocrats are still the monopolists, but mainly on the left wing, claiming the right to rule on the behalf of the masses, who better not speak, least they balls everything up. It's a false claim to expertise, which is really about control, power and money. And it is certainly not democratic.

We have certainly moved from a democracy to a technocracy.

One thing: masks concentrate pathogens near your nose and mouth. Masks are a draconian measure that overlooks other problems. The doctor also speaks of other data related to Covid: herd immunity, immunity system, comorbidities, real data on all case mortality, winter burden or respiratory viruses... Covid-19 is not unusual. Government interventions caused the spike in deaths in vulnerable people:

This week I have commented on two videos coming out of the World Economic Forum in response to the Covid-19 event, from Geneva. The first comment was made yesterday, about the Great Reset, a stronger private-sector (undemocratic) take-over in global policy that will affect all parts of our lives. This second video here below concerns the United Nations Environment Program.

<https://www.weforum.org/agenda/2020/07/new-nature-economy-report-ii-future-business-positive/>

Summary of main points of the video. (My own comments are in parentheses. (....) )

$10 trillion in business opportunities with 395 million new jobs by 2030.

(Actualisation of goals and accountability? The UN Agenda 21 report claimed they would "achieve health for all by the year 2000." paragraph 6.4.)

To bring this to pass we need systemic changes in three ways:

1. Food, land, and ocean yields
2. Infrastructure and the built environment
3. Extracting and energy

(On points one and two above, the science is opposite to what this video is imposing. Yes, food, land and oceans need serious care and restoration today. But regenerative farming is what solves all these issues. This video mentions regenerative farming, but in lip-service only. It advances technology and the large agricultural companies as the solution and these are the biggest problems in our current systems. When we improve soils naturally, we address points one and two above. Not over urbanisation, but human living on the land bringing it into regeneration, according to its own natural principles of life.)

Agriculture: looking to regenerate soils as an asset base, not an extractive base.

(This appears to be lip-service only, given their proposed solution in the agricultural monopolies of today, which are completely destructive of our soils.)

Urban areas: are underutilized. Shift people out of nature into these urban areas, to let wildlife take care of themselves in their own environment.

(This idea of separating humanity from nature, by a hyper urbanisation, is wrong. It is said to save nature, but it serves other ends, like the control of the population through lack of land ownership, the lowering of wages through over population in cities. It was the realised dream of the first industrial revolution: cheap labour. This is feudalism and serfdom and it was first re-implemented in our modern era by Rockefeller, using the "save nature" cover as well. But the primary thing is that urbanisation does not save nature. Urbanisation firstly hugely increased our illnesses, including mental illness, and blows out the national health budget. Over urbanisation, that this video describes, is a massive mistake. While it is might be good to have some nature reserves for various reasons, nature needs human presence to tend it in the right way. We are to part of nature, not separated from it. It is our separation in recent centuries that has hurt nature the most. We lose our understanding of nature and allow it to be abused by modern technologies. When we are close to nature and the food chain, we learn and support ecological farming. Biblically, humanity was created to part of the soil and natural environment. It was designed this way, so we would "tend and care for it." The problem with modernity is that we have forsaken this primary commission given by God to humanity. We were made from the dirt. Taking us from the dirt will spell disaster.)

(To this end the United Nations Agenda 21 is a "non-binding" article that rezones land taking it out of the control of private ownership of purpose. However, many nations have signed on to it and it is being implemented at local levels in law. Here is a quick example of forceful rezoning of private land:

<https://m.youtube.com/watch?v=zKzZUyKS3rw>
<https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/content/documents/Agenda21.pdf>
<https://www.nap.edu/read/10455/chapter/4#19>

(Last time we were in Australia we remember there was a media debate about rezoning large regions of land and forcing people out of bushfire risk areas, into residential areas, and this is what Agenda 21 paragraphs 7.57- 7.66 provides.)

We need policy in 4 areas:

1. Go beyond just measuring the GDP
2. Phasing out subsidies to incentivise farmers to invest in nature positive pathways
3. Invest in 4th generation industrial revolution technologies, like block chain, to save food waste
4. Investing in human capital, to make it inclusive

President of a Norwegian agricultural company, one of the world's biggest: a sense of urgency for dramatic change very quickly. Succeed through technology, science, and collaboration (meaning global markets). 15 transitions in 3 socio-economic systems. Profitability has to coincide with sustainability. Food and land use: pro-nature solutions. Decarbonising food: our world class technology in the hands of the farmers, digital capabilities, a satellite farm weather app, gives farmers hyper local forecasts. For regenerative agriculture: teaming up with IBM to ensure consumers reward farmers for sustainable production. No explanation of this last point.

(The way to decarbonise food is to eradicate the chemical farming these agriculture companies impose on the world. It is not through solar powered tractors, or other digital technology. Regenerating our soils naturally sequesters carbon from the atmosphere, more than any other solution.)

A representative from Tchad: the role of the private sector in achieving sustainable natural agriculture. How indigenous people can partner with these private sector solutions. The private sector is firmly established as the solution to the climate and ecological crises.

(Listening to this video you get the distinct idea it is a trade fair, a private sector business fair, not at all a community orientated restoration program. Because of the private sectors sponsorship of UN and other formerly public bodies, it gives the whole thing the appearance of public service.)

(Though ecosystems were pointed out as the thing to restore, no mention was made of the what is harming these, i.e. the agricultural companies with their chemicals and GMO's, which now totally dominate the environment. This is also the primary destroyer of clean water systems and run off into our ocean. And no mention was made on how to restore the ecosystems, through natural methods that don't require costly investment or new digital technologies.)

United Nations environment rep: the Paris agreement is our only hope from today doom to come. The answer is to invest in renewables.

(This again is a sales pitch. The number one issue in restoring our environment (including the atmosphere, if you think that is needed) is the restoration of the soil ecosystem through natural regenerative methods. This means returning to an integrated crop and animal farming system, rather than our current industrial farming of both crops and animals separately. This not only improves our ecosystems, but also dramatically reduces harmful pathogens in the animal and human systems. This also builds social peace in our communities. Science has proven this path to ecological and atmospheric restoration, as the number one and essential step, though this is not mentioned by those speaking on this video presentation: because it is natural and required no high technological purchases.)

(Two undertones throughout the video: 1. That these imminent experts know more than low-life people who live out and write on natural paths to regeneration of food, land, and sea. 2. The representatives in the video from all continents build a sense of a global market base for their technological products.)

(Global cooperation is good. Some of their perceived problems on this video are correct. But it is disingenuous because their solutions are market orientated, not genuinely what our land needs. This is why it's a clear sales pitch. Their solutions are not scientific or correct. The current chemical paths in farming produce highly deficient foods in nutrition. GMO's have no proven improved nutritious value. They remain untested today in outcomes that will occur in our bio-systems. Their solutions make us nutritional deficient. This is proven science, though ignored by this panel on the video.)

(This is the problem with the current system: 1. Monopolies produce poverty in local communities around the world. 2. Chemical farming produces nutritional deficiency. 3. These two together (poverty and nutritional deficiency) produce poor health in children. 4. Then we are told that abortion and vaccines are the solution. 5. But instead, dismantling global tax and business corruption are the solution. These things are never addressed at Davos or by the World Economic Forum, but these are the elephants in the room.)

This below outlines the plan that will affect us all. This is a video from the World Economic Forum in Geneva, about the Great Reset, which is now being advanced through the Covid-19 hyped crisis.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VHRkkeecg7c&t=71s>

“Since it made its entry on to the world stage, COVID-19 has torn up the existing script of how to govern countries, live with others, and take part in the global economy in a dramatic way. Professor Schwab and CEO and Founder of the Monthly Barometer Thierry Malleret explore these disruptions in their new book, COVID-19: The Great Reset.

(Please, don't tear up the script of democracy that has taken centuries to draft.)

“The World Economic Forum is the International Organization for Public-Private Cooperation. The Forum engages the foremost political, business, cultural and other leaders of society to shape global, regional and industry agendas. We believe that progress happens by bringing together people from all walks of life who have the drive and the influence to make positive change.”

(An unelected forum shaping the policies that will govern our lives, with heavily vested/ private interest of profit driving the whole process.)

Three guidelines:

1. Security
2. Inclusion
3. Sustainable

Five parts:

1. Social contract: today and tomorrow, current growing debt/ reducing the gap with emerging nations. (This probably means austerity for the poor. But there is no debt if it is forgiven. It's just printed money. A social contract is supposed to be democratic, where we agree together. This "contract" is agreed by one party at Davos.)

2. Decarbonisation of the economy: the sale of new technologies. (No attempt has been made to address regenerative agriculture, which is free (no product is sold) and is proven to be the foremost way of fixing the entire environment.)

3. 4th industrial revolution: technology, digital living. (This means the development of patents. Every "solution" is achievable by the development and marketing of new patents, which these current dominating businesses will control. The whole program is a marketing plan. That is what Davos essentially is about. It is not about "us the people.")

4. Moving from shareholder capitalism to stakeholder capitalism: investing in "survivability" instead of short-term profits. (This means shutting down businesses that don't invest in their new survivor/green patents. This applies to things like energy, agriculture, education, health, communication and much more. It is a plan to dominate what is allowed or not allowed.)

5. The need for much stronger global cooperation: to create a reset in our social, ecological, and economic thinking. (This means access to all global markets, with no market barriers. It means the humbling of all independent thinking, non-cooperative governments.)

This whole system is disingenuous and will lead to a greater loss in global and local community resilience and then to a greater degree of ceded control to centralisation to "fix" worsening conditions. The main issue here is more profits for the billionaires who run the World Economic Forum, Davos, and the Reset Plan.

These ideas were created through Davos, which is a joint private/ public forum, for leading business owners and leading governments. It's to develop a new joint government from which policies will be made for all our nations. It will favour the elite. It won't address corruption and injustice and therefore it won't successfully address the gap it pretends to. Other attendees at Davos have noted the complete absence of discussion on resetting tax and other policies that reduce this gap.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=T3gFNd54reg>

This is a non-democratic reset of the world, a strengthening of centralisation, achieved through the sense of crises that is constantly being played up, by media and educationalists the main business owners sponsor. They sponsor the BBC and the Guardian, for example, and scores of the top universities.

"Holistic" and "interdependence" mean that no one can be outside the system. These kind of good words and ideas are realigned to their business and controlling goals. The economists and strategists who are speaking at these events, writing these books, and addressing the media are paid, employed, promoted, or sponsored by the main architects of the plans, the global business interests. They are not independent thinkers. Independent thinkers are not welcome at these forums.

"Macro" means the need for central planning. "Nothing can be considered in isolation": which means no freedom. The claim is that if we give up this freedom voluntarily, they will fix the huge unemployment, impoverishment, and social unrest. We can go back to our lives and leave it to them. We already know Davos doesn't care about the impoverishment of others, or they would fix the global offshore corruption they have created. It is their own policies that have created the mass migration they now claim they are here to fix. Offshore secret accounts even provide financing for terrorism.

There is one solution that is the foundation of a true reset. That is to stop the domination of the global monopolies; to stop their collusion with world governments for a greater power and access to growing monopolist profits; to turn around the tax and financial corruption that impoverishes local community and local democracy. This will put us on the path to security and resilience. The Great Reset of the World Economic Forum is a lie. My wife and I live in a developing world local community and we see every day the things that deplete its security and resilience and we know plainly the things that must change. None of these things are being addressed by the World Economic Forum.

Then we need parliaments within nations, and local governments, to make decisions for local people, not these boards in Davos and their councils and forums. These are unelected and have no democratic relationships or accountability with the people. They are dictators, claiming "expertise" rights over "simple people" who aren't fit to govern themselves. They wouldn't even mind if we all died. We are not seen as human as themselves. In fact, they even want to change humanity with artificial intelligence, to make us digital hybrids. They want to patent humanity him/herself, so we ourselves are owned by the technocrats. This is the future they have stated in their own plans. No one has put these words in their mouths, it is what they themselves have said. No decision should flow from global bodies to local governments.

Only elected bodies should represent the people who vote, and these elected bodies must take no money from private bodies. There must be no sponsorship, or blend of "private/ public governance," as they term it. Let our elected MP's stand now to bring justice, accountability and try these private interests that are buying our public lives and bring legal deliverance to our people. When I was a boy monopoly was illegal. This must be repeated now. Parliament must rule without being paid or owned by business. They are elected by the public and must serve the public alone. Like Britain for example, these MP's must stand for us, and not for their party, not for their party leader, who can easily be bought out by global corporate interests.

Henry Ford hospitals show hydroxychloroquine "on it's own" cuts Covid death rate by half. With antibiotic it cuts death rate by 71%. With zinc, even more. Used before hospitalisation, even more, Ford appeals for non political treatment of patients to save lives.

For everyone under 70, the Covid death rate is less than or equal to seasonal influenza.

Not seeing increase of fatalities in older people.

You can't, nor do you want to, stop all cases.

Cases now are in the younger people, which is good, it develops population based immunity.

In Arizona, over 60% of "Covid hospitalisations" are not Covid, They are hospitalised for something else entirely, but happen to also test positive for Covid, many times without symptoms. In Texas, most patients in filled hospitals aren't Covid. It's mainly wrong reporting.

Estimates in what is needed for herd immunity were way off. There is a peak that is much lower where the virus stops. That is because there is already immunity in the population, from other coronaviruses and from T-cells. The cases on the ships showed this.

But even in nursing homes, a large percentage of infections are asymptomatic, which could indicate the virus is weakening.

If you are afraid and don't want to go out, then don't.

A very grave and prophetic final speech of President Eisenhower.

Two major warnings of Eisenhower's last speech:

1. That the new military complex of the USA would take too large an influence and financial place, in contradiction to the nation's peaceful goals
2. That a scientific and technological elite would dominate government and private freedom, that universities would no longer have intellectual freedom. "Public policy could itself become the captive of a technological and scientific elite."

These are the two places we are at today.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=OyBNmecVtdU&fbclid=IwAR1mvCOQdzRGGBoyQd2I1AuHwr7Jo62skrsUykR4qaSt8O6587SRZB-qjsI>

Studies in Ford hospitals shows 71% less mortality when Covid patients were treated early with hydroxychloroquine and the antibiotic. (This still wasn't early enough: all patients had already been hospitalised.) This doesn't include zinc, which is even more effective when joined with the other two drugs. Later in the illness steroids are needed.

I don't think these tests are good when the crisis is on. Why withhold a known treatment from some to test if they die? Its like not giving them a parachute to test if falling without one of bad for your health. Just tell them its for science.

Please don't mind the reference to Trump. This isn't about him.

Vandana Shiva on Covid and the growth of centralised wealth and power. Just to repeat, I first saw this in the agricultural industry, how a monopoly has been built through the global control of fertility and seed, which brings impoverishment to locals. It is the same principles by the same people that is operating in other areas of human life, to build markets and patents over huge sectors of the human population (markets.) This isn't a conspiracy, it's the current market economy in reality. It is destroying democracy.

Bill Gates and the war on cash, for the 1% wealthy to monopolise money, transaction profits and software profits globally. Digital transactions also give the 1% huge data wealth to sell on to advertisers. And to remove freedom from the common person. Their spending will be regulated, while the rich will have different laws, like it is today with tax. It also further empowers the surveillance state. Part of the Covid fallout: asserting without evidence that "cash spreads the infection" and that other forms of commerce do not.

There had been a great deal of research over the years, strongly suggesting it could inhibit the entry of viruses into cells, and that it also interfered with viral replication once inside the cell."

"...The other reason for recommending hydroxychloroquine is that it is extremely safe. It is, for example, the most widely prescribed drug in India. Billions upon billions of doses have been prescribed. It is available over the counter in most countries. So I felt pretty comfortable in recommending that it could be tried. Staying indoors decreases our vitamin D

Vitamin D helps protect against Covid

https://borsche.de/res/Vitamin\_D\_Essentials\_EN.pdf

Wearing a mask can decrease our oxygen intake. This study recommends special measures if masks are worn for a lengthy period.

<https://news.stanford.edu/2020/04/14/stanford-researchers-reengineer-covid-19-face-masks/>

Jointly, these two conditions above harm our immune system

When my mother kicked me outside to “get some fresh air,” she didn’t say, “and put your face mask on.” And we lived through flu pandemics more deadly than Covid-19.

And if Covid is aerosol (microscopic) it would pass through a mask, and go well beyond 2 metres of social distancing.

Eric Toner, a senior scholar at the Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security, said, “I think that mask-wearing and some degree of social distancing, we will be living with — hopefully living with happily — for several years.”

I don't think this would be good for our health, especially if you are someone who spends many hours each day in the public. With the very low death rates for Covid now known, this trade in health probably isn't a good thing.

No point in intimidating the public as “being selfish” for not complying, or censoring scientists who don’t agree. We chose democracy so this wouldn’t happen. We need to think about that before giving it up. Our democratic nations started as federations, with decentralised local government. We did this for good reason. It’s in crises that we give power to central government. And then it’s always hard to get it back.

So if people want to wear a mask because they believe it helps, let them. And if a shop owner wants people to wear a mask inside the shop, let them. But if otherwise people believe they are ok without a mask, let them.

A potentially very important video in relation to Covid deaths.

Another serious question. It’s good to see someone a bit more “mainline” saying this issue matters and needs to be seriously looked at. The reason it is serious is because at least one large scientific study (done among thousands of USA military personnel) indicates that flu vaccines (made using dog cell lines) do significantly indicate interference with corona viruses. This then could ignite the kind of intense immunity storms we have seen as the major cause of death from Covid 19. (I have attached this study below in my comments.) In this video, John Campbell deals with a different study, among children (see in my second comment below.) Those who received the flu vax were 4.4 times more likely to later be infected with non-flu viruses, including corona viruses. The study said this finding could have “important implications. John said “almost prophetic.” John Campbell does not seem to be aware of the adult study mentioned above, but he admits that he is “dissatisfied with the information given out by the WHO.” He is concerned that this is a definitive issue, given the intended prevalence of the flu vaccine for this coming season.

John showed that the British Medical Journal has noted this and asked whether the Covid hotspots were associated with this influenza vaccine. <https://www.bmj.com/content/369/bmj.m1932/rr-15>

We have already looked online about the kinds of flu vaccines delivered to Wuhan, to Europe, to New York and Brazil, and they are all the new dog related flu vaccines in question. John asks if there is a correlation between this flu vaccine and Covid death hotspots. We have already confirmed that Yes, there is a very high correlation. Look for yourself.

The BMJ also noted that this correlation in the study above for children and said it's possible the flu vaccine alters our immunity systems.

<https://www.bmj.com/content/368/bmj.m810/rr-0>

Dolores Cahill (a highly qualified immunologist) has been censored for saying this publicly. John doesn't know why the flu vaccine would effect the immune system this way, but Dolores said it is because the dog cell lines have corona viruses.

John is urging for an official response. He says the first rule in health care is "do no harm."

I doubt big pharma will be forced on this issue however. Industry sponsored "fact-checkers" have already irresponsibly and inadequately dismissed the danger. (The implications of admitting fault would be massive.) But coming up to another winter in Europe, this does need to be taken seriously, especially since the aged are the ones most in danger. Therefore, this is far more relevant than measures to lockdown the general population.

This is a main area in which capitalist-philanthropy expects to make its gains. The vaccine industry is humungous in money. I am absolutely not anti-vaccine, and I don't follow whatever concern people raise, just because they raise it. The issue is the huge conflict of interests, the lack of accountability in the industry, the lack of genuine government control, the total rejection of responsibility for harm (legal immunity), the unethical practices in developing nations and some other issues this article raises. Again, when I was a child the vaccine industry was government run. It had none of the corruption we see that riddles the industry today. Conflicts of interest were then clearly and non-negotiably illegal. To say this has nothing to do with the current Covid situation would be naïve to the extreme. It's just simply the money. Its always the money.

A vaccine emergency is called, vaccine companies lobby government is to make vaccines compulsory, yet there are far more deaths accidentally from other medication in hospitals. Where is the emergency here? This is a run away industry. Where is the government I grew up with? I am not sure of the amounts, but the Gates Foundation does give substantially to each of these groups below, and many more such groups. His philanthropic colleagues give to these groups also. It shows the control one person has over our public institutions. When I was a boy this was illegal - totally. It still should also be illegal for a public broadcaster (like BBC) to receive funding from a private person or corporation. It is a public broadcaster serving the interests of the British public. This is clear breach of public trust. The broadcaster is not serving the British public. This was illegal in Australia when I was a boy.

The image means more to us now because of the Covid event. Gates and others call it capitalist-philanthropy. They believe it's the most efficient form of giving, because it's profitable and this makes more for the philanthropic cause. This means that all these investments are expected to make profits. They are not actually philanthropic. It is the development of market share, globally. Monopolists have done this since Rockefeller.

A recent gift of $20 million by Gates to John Hopkins Hospital was to support the John Hopkin's "Bill & Melinda Gates Institute for Population and Reproductive Health." This means population control, especially through abortion. This is what "reproduce health" means. This isn't speculation. Gates himself says this.

You might say it's good, all this investment in research helping with breakthroughs. I don't think so. Medical practitioners want a cooperation between medical/ clinical staff, scientists and the government, which isn't profit driven and without being locked into a narrow vision/ control. This, they say, makes the best progress for patient health and medical breakthroughs.

I am not a Trumpist, nor a Brexiteer. I like Europe. I am not left or right, capitalist or socialist. But I do believe in democracy, and local democracy at that, not just for me, but for others as well. So it's local but also global, helping each other.

So I am against a globalism that cares nothing for our national interests, but only for their global markets. And I am against a nationalism that is tribalistic. You might call these the left and right. It is a vicious propagandist battle, into which most things are swallowed in the vortex, even hydroxychloroquine.

The left is treasonable, against the interests of the nation, building instead the global market and the surveillance systems that control us, our industries, education, professions, and media. It's there before our eyes. The right is hideous, a more boisterous disdain of the other. Both systems have contempt for the value of human life. The left holds others in a sophisticated disdain, the right holds others in a more "deplorable" and open disdain.

Both systems were presented to us in the last USA election. One, a warmongering left, intent on building corporate hegemony in the world, bringing down Syrian and Russian interests, even Russia itself, and establishing a political correctness that favours their market control. The other, a nationalist right, that presented an equally dangerous path of tearing down the institutions of peace built after the Second World War, where both left and right were curtailed, where a co-operative balance of power was more favoured.

This is the battle we are all caught up in, as we approach another USA election. It will not often be spoken of in this way. It will be about hydroxychloroquine, masks, Russia probes, statues, China, philanthropy. It will be about saving the world through capitalist-philanthropy or withdrawing to save our nation, while still exploiting others. Either side it's often really about saving our own interests. We can become blinded to that, in the confusing and heated arguments.

As Christians, we don't stand for a particular government, either side, less we become a partaker with their sins. Neither can we sit back and place our hopes in one side, one party, one person, putting things right. That isn't going to happen. We now need to be involved, not on any side, but on the side of truth, love and the common good. If we are not involved, we all have a lot to lose. We must notice that a free and good future does not take either of these sides.

What we want to build is a family where there is respect for the other, not an attempt to push the other out while we build our monopoly. We want to build a society of sharing or learning from each other and contributing what we each have. We want to build fellowship in our daily lives, love in our local communities.

From a conversation with a friend about some concerns being more than just "ignorant superstition:" This one is about wider issues in what is covered by the title "family planning" in philanthropy:

"I think it's more than cultural sensitivities. In many ways the West brings a colonialism of ideology to Africa. The abortion and family planning thing is part of that and is strong and there is evidence of unethical behaviour from agencies that is worrying, especially if you are African. To fear that vaccinations may contain sterility agents is not an unfounded fear here. The fear isn't just ignorant superstition. It comes from years of abuse and exploitation of their populations, as well as direct evidence that builds concern. In Kenya there was a case where Catholic scientists claimed to have found a sterility agent in a vaccine, after WHO officially announced they had developed one. (I have sources for this if you want them.) That has been denied, but announcements from agencies about promoting depopulation in Africa are concerning, especially when all that is needed is justice, not depopulation. They speak about overpopulation for feeding, but in our experience here that is not true. It is Monsanto that destroys the farms/ environment/ wild life and brings hunger, not overpopulation.

We get "aid emails" from Gates often. Recently they are mostly pushing abortion (illegal in many countries here) as the solution for poverty, which really largely comes from Western oppression in Africa which isn't addressed (trillions of dollars taken by the West, spoiling local community, building malnutrition for children)"

Here is an example of so many scientists calling for population control, with (quoting the scientists) a clear eugenics call. Africa is often picked out for this in particular. This time for "climate change" control. But population isn't the source of "climate change." We live in Africa and it is Monsanto that is depleting the soils, which, as proven in science, is the leading cause of CO2 in the atmosphere. They also site population control to reduce immigration fear. But again, justice restores Africa and stems emigration, not abortion. After killing our soils, they want to kill our babies. It's clearly stated and people have reason for concern. Bill Gate's father championed the "Family Planning" organisation, with its population control goals. It's also a money spinning "charity."

Dr Chris Martenson on virus mutation, how the virus is spread, the politicisation and monetisation of the virus, and hydroxychloroquine.

As hydroxychloroquine is an antiviral it works early in the onset of Covid. The Ford study showed significant increases in patient survival when used, but even this study was only for hospitalised patients, that is, not as early as one would hope. Earlier usage would even yield better results than this study shows. The Ford tests showed no danger in using the drug.

I don't think the study mentioned zinc, which when used, makes hydroxychloroquine work even better. The Ford study began in March, when it wasn't yet known well by Ford hospitals how this treatment works best.

False studies to date have used the treatment very late, or used dangerous dosages, or haven't been proper tests, but phone in responses.

These wider corporate interests are the same as those who today run the WHO. It's all about global patents. Do we want them running our governments and making our public policy? They don't care about people. It's time to change the way we do our agriculture, business and health. It's time for democracy.

Don't fall for the nationalism and tribalism stories that are used to divide us. The issue is that oligarchy is now running our lives. We are no longer democracies. It isn't too late to change, if we realise that governments don't rule over us, but they rule for us, and we tell them to restore democracy that represents the people and not the monopoly, not the lobbyists who "donate" to government, to media and to education.

Officially it was noted yesterday that millions more people have slipped below the "poverty line" in Nigeria. That's millions of individuals, like you and me. Millions. You know what that means? Millions more people vulnerable to all kinds of calamities and risks to life every day.

That is the economic destruction to date. It hasn't yet really begun, unless we stop this crazy international program and return to reality.

How many dead from Covid (in Nigeria) so far? Under 700.

How many die each day from other diseases? Thousands.

Covid hasn't done this. Our policy responses have done it. We believed the initial falsehoods about Covid and made wrong policies without considering the consequences. It's well past time to change.

It has been a journey for us here, in northern Nigeria. Years of violence, for different reasons. One of them is the conflict between crop farmers and cattle herders.

We bought land right between these two groups, with armed conflict going on over our heads, and an army presence for years. We reached out to both farmer and herder groups. Now it's a different story.

Part of this journey was listening to Alan Savory. We reached out to the Fulani cattle herders and invited them on to our land each night to sleep with their cattle during dry season. About 200 head for two months, bequeathing us freely with urine and manure.

We have only done this for one year so far and already it has transformed our farms. Last year the soil was dead and the harvest was useless. Soils all around us are dying, with overuse of chemicals. We work in many states and we see this growing soil depletion contributing widely to the destruction of virgin forests for new soil, and to conflict between farmers and herders everywhere.

Well, we planted on our land two months ago and we already have the best corn crop in our region. People are already asking what our "magic" is. We have truck loads of manure to use, all for free. Best of all, our relationships are growing with those our kind once were in conflict with.

We talk about building "ecosystem" in three areas, needed for local democracy and peace: soil, inter-ethnic relationships and nutritional health. This builds huge local wealth, that's gives our region resilience. This is the "golden goose."

We are starting classes soon, gathering people from the farmer and herder groups together, showing how we can support each other for a restored region. These are old practices here, which have been lost. Now we want to relearn them.

This Rockefeller Report from 2010 envisaged certain possible futures and how arising new technologies may provide solutions. (See link below.) One possible future concerned a virus outbreak. This is page 18-25 of the linked report.

Called "Lock Step," the scenario depicts a global virus outbreak which leads to an immediate increase in government control to manage the impact. People herald government takeover of their lives (including biometric ID's for all citizens) to secure their safety. Stronger governments lead to a more nationalistic world, some governments improving their nations and others acting more corruptly and selfishly.

An example of good occurs in India. The Indian government takes control over its population to overcome the ritualistic practices that pollute the Ganges. They enforce laws that change the behaviour of the people. The government works in league with technology providers to clean the river and overcome the diseases that arise from the water pollution.

The scenario overall is about

- * The strength of government
- * The simplicity and ignorance of the people
- * The goodness of the technology providers to provide the solution.

(Sound familiar?)

However, the truth is that these same technology providers are today spoiling the agriculture in India, and this is destroying India's clean water ways, impoverishing the population (causing riots and insecurity in the nation), and this is bringing the most diseases to the people. This reality is completely ignored in the scenario narrative.

That is, it isn't the ignorant Indians that are bringing the most harm, but the deployment of new technologies in agriculture from global monopolies. The traditional agricultural practices and local knowledge of the Indians are their true solution. The Rockefeller report completely missed this. The solution is the absence of Rockefeller and their "initiatives," to allow the Indian people to secure the healing of their land and agricultural values and practices.

Rockefeller seems to be a continuation of the British East India Company and its terrible policies that disrupted Indian's sustained systems and lives (especially in its agriculture policies) for the sake of extracting profit to Britain. If Gandhi were here today, he would certainly say so.

However, a long time ago, Rockefeller learned that its growth of market share must be dressed as a public good, in philanthropic language, for it to succeed.

Some real data on Covid. Prof Levitt told Prof Ferguson back in March that his figures were inflated by a multiple of 10 to 12 times. That is how the data has shown to work out since then.

Lancet's fraudulent study on hydroxychloroquine and WHO's rush to use it for such important "life saving policy" without checking it.

Such breath-taking miscarriage of duty to care for human life. There is no way of understanding this, unless to say something seriously is wrong with the industry.

This economist traces the flow of money out of real productivity and job wealth into financial assets during the 2008 bailout and 2020 Covid bailout. He says there must be a reverse, where money flows back into real productivity, while doing so in a "green" way. He said, if not, then the disequilibrium between the "feudal" lords (the 0.1%) and the rest of the population in austerity, will produce a "fascism" (call it what you want) that will destroy modern society.

He said the fear Covid is producing, in which we give power to the state, is worrying. The technology in logarithms(?) today makes the KGB look inept. When governments are controlled by corporate interests, we are in a "1984 scenario." This mainline, qualified economist, a friend of Bernie Sanders, is not optimistic.

If this was a real pandemic, with death rates like the plague, people would push the doors down to get a drug that saved lives. The response of nonchalance just doesn't make sense. Now WHO also cancels hydroxychloroquine as a treatment. The Ford study below.

The 2010 Rockefeller Report: Scenarios for the Future of Technology and International Development. A scenario for a global pandemic, economic collapse and government control. See links in discussion below.

"The Rockefeller Foundation supports work that expands opportunity and strengthens resilience to social, economic, health, and environmental challenges—affirming its pioneering philanthropic mission, since 1913, to "promote the well-being" of humanity."

We don't see this where we live. We see patent building. We see lives being destroyed by monopolistic agricultural cultures. We have approached these philanthropic organisations repeatedly for help in building lives through education, peace-building, agricultural programs and health but have received no support. We see no support for the people in our region in these areas. We see support that will be given for abortion and other ideological advances from their institutions.

This is not to say that the UN doesn't do good work, or many aid organisations with them. They do very good and we believe in the UN, but it must be democratic, supported by governments and not patent seeking "philanthropists" driving their own agendas. These philanthropists also do some good work, but the industries they support drive a much wider complex of injustice in the developing world, that puts real change beyond hope. A veneer of philanthropy is placed over a monopolist reality. It is "monopolist laundering," not unlike money laundering, and government have a duty to protect citizens from such an economy.

Some lingo in this monopolist industry (from the Rockefeller Report): "the role of technology and the future of globalization." This means new patents with open markets for full exploitation. It means the depletion of local democracy and genuine local empowerment and wealth in developing, as well as in all nations as the wealth gap widens. The more this gap widens the more the need for autocracy.

Peter Schwartz was one of the modelling experts in this Rockefeller Report. See him on Wikipedia:

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Peter\_Schwartz\_%2Futurist%29

And Wikipedia's take on one part of this Rockefeller Report: "One scenario entitled 'Lock Step' describes a worldwide pandemic leading to international economic failures and oppressive authoritarian controls." See the link on this Wikipedia page to the actual text of the Rockefeller Report:

<https://issuu.com/dueprocesstv/docs/scenario-for-the-future>

Our area of interest here is pages 18-25, entitled "Lock Step."

Schwartz said, "Technology is poised to transform the lives of millions of people throughout the world." This is a point we breeze past too easily. Technology has the potential of enslaving humanity, especially with the power of 5G, the Internet of Things and Artificial Intelligence. If this industry is led by the commercial interests of monopolies, and not by the democratic control of the people, then enslavement is highly likely. A very highly placed whistle blower within the industry, Eon Musk (CEO of Tesla) has stated this at-hand danger clearly and strongly.

Schwartz echoed the philanthropists' goal of "using technology to spread resilience," especially in the developing world. I must reiterate here; the true goal is to build their own markets. Technology does not spread resilience in the developing world. Only justice does. Resilience means the local robustness, the ability of the local community, with its own wealth, freedom to decide and act, its own industrial ability and agricultural fertility, to withstand challenges that arise against its community. Agricultural and pharmaceutical monopolies have no interest in developing local resilience, but only bigger markets for themselves. Monopolists deplete this resilience every day in rural communities of the developing world. These global businesses and their connections syphon trillions of dollars from these "developing" communities into offshore secret accounts, some of which returns as terrorist funding. This is the nature of business. So claiming that business can lead the charge in philanthropy, rather than properly regulated and transparent government oversight, is clearly a conflict of interests. It's false.

I would say that "scenario planning" found in this Rockefeller Report isn't the hope for the future. Dismantling our systemic injustice is the only hope. This is the only scenario that will deliver us from enslavement. When we know justice is being implemented, then and only then can we start to plot hopeful scenarios of true democratic and local development that will build loving resilience.

In this work of scenario building, monopolists engage the "experts," which means organisations, scientists, educationists, and media outlets, that they sponsor (with tax free funds), in a growing web of undemocratic influence. These "experts" enhance the overall goals of the wider business plan, from which engaged voices derive benefit. The real voices of the dispossessed, marginalised, and poor are not present in these scenario councils. The voices of detracting scientists are also not present. The voices of government play a minor (or echoing) role, as they too are often helpless before the power of the world's financial markets today. Instead, governments often participate in the financial incentives and job-sharing opportunities themselves. This kind of philanthropy is more an ideological and corporate colonialism.

Issues in food and agricultural, because these are the epicentre of our social and ecological crisis. If you have a problem with the water supply, with oceans, with climate change, with public health, the likely source is in the agricultural and food system.

The patent outcome, is the obvious conflict of interests.

Just an example of how the gates foundation manipulated the democratic process at the United Nations. And how countries like US and Australia lobby to obstruct trade barriers for their agricultural products join weaker nations. On the one hand this playing are flaming to be scientific and democratic, but there is generally a contradiction here. "Will people shut-up and listen to the science," and the business money behind it?

Scientist traces possible lab origins of Covid-19. You want hear from scientists on this in the mainstream media, though there are many who are very concerned. Gain of function research. The Pentagon also is doing such research on different paganism, whether we know so or not. Wuhan is being funded by the US, which comes back to Gates, in which they are making pandemic type pathogens. Gates is the force behind identifying pandemic pathogens towards vaccine research, at the expense of investing in traditional public health: PPE, hospital funding, training in public health, enough doctors. Gates does not back the latter.

So we have he pandemic viral industrial complex.

The real problems of injustice in nations where epidemics are breaking out are being ignored.

A retried pathologist from York University on Covid and the negligent response.

Neil Ferguson was informed by the best expert in modelling back in February that his model data was wrong.

Science doesn't work on consensus, but on healthy debate.

He doesn't like it when scientists pretend not to be political when their entire jobs are political. A circle of scientists are focusing on the their own niche and are modelling data without peer review.

The idea that if you walk 2 metres from the person in front of you that you are not breathing the same air is nonsense.

This year of deaths in the UK for the population is not relatively high (he gives the data).

Top specialists (he lists they names and positions in the UK) said the lockdown did not effect the outcome.

The goal seems to be to control a narrative, rather than to protect the community from a real emergency, despite the data.

Selected television pictures of selected hospitals is not science.

The testing isn't peer reviewed and doesn't tell us anything without full analysis, and he lists the particulars. Most of the immunology is being ignored.

Experts not allowed to speak their mind.

If this was a super-virus supermarket staff and hospital staff would be dropping like flies, but the hospital death rate is below the population.

Disputes the r number and the national fatality rate figures in the way they are being used.

There is a dysfunctionality in the way we address these things.

This situation matters because we are thinking about our children.

The science on masks stopping flu is very dodgy. They don't stop Covid.

Months after the "stable fell down" we introduce airport quarantine. It doesn't make any sense.

Most of the people who went into the ICU probably shouldn't have because they were too old. Most of them would have died anyway, so it makes no sense to lockdown the country and hurt so many other vulnerable people as well. Even if the NHS is stretched a bit for a short term, it can handle it, it can bring other centres quickly online. The NHS is there to save us, not us to save the NHS.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dRYEBHDyR3Y&fbclid=IwAR1mRPsZ4AnDtb5fbJHmbG3DBZcXIAO4DOLH-YbVRC4fRtD75ux-3Lq5qn0&app=desktop>

We say a crisis is fine, the government will bail out the economy.

Well, it wasn't fine in Egypt. Pharaoh bailed out the economy during the crisis of famine, by coming into ownership of the whole land and population.

When the government prints money to make loans to restore the economy, to restore banks and business, then it owns that economy, banks and businesses.

The central bank comes into a larger degree of ownership of our lives. That is what "bail out" means.

The banks already own all our houses. What happens when we are owned? We lose freedom of speech. It's not a conspiracy. It's just life.

Easy money is never easy. I think the Amish are right not to take aid or funds from the government, not to participate in the pharaonic government of militarism, not to have that blood on their hands.

An interview with Vandana Shiva

Some seed are good for some environments, other seed for other environments. Keep your variety of seed, don't lose it to buy GMO's.

"In 1987, I was invited to a meeting on biotechnology in Bogeve in France and Geneva in Switzerland, which was attended by UN officials, some independent scientists like me, and the agro-chemical lobby, which was soon becoming the biotechnology lobby. The meeting was informal, but what was being discussed sent a chill down my spine.

"They said that we're not making enough money from chemicals and the Green Revolution, so we need to apply new techniques of splicing genes to sell GMOs, or genetically modified organisms. Back then, there were no GMOs. Doing this, they said, would allow them to secure their future growth because they could patent the GMO seeds and collect royalties from farmers. In particular, their focus would be to expand to the countries of the global south, where the biggest markets and the largest number of farmers were.

"And so they needed a global treaty in place to impose patented seeds. This is why the Intellectual Property Rights (IPR), World Trade Organisation (WTO), General Agreement on Trade in Services (GATS), and others came into the picture. What was most horrifying was their ambition to limit this to a total of just five companies that would control food and health globally. Today, we have four—I call them the poison cartel.

"Listening to their ideas, I asked them whether they had looked at the safety of GMOs. They responded saying- if we wait for that, we will be left behind; we can't afford to stop. That's when I decided that if they weren't going to look for safety, I would."

"... and what I responded to in my fight against Monsanto was the mining of genes and biodiversity.

You take the genes from India, and you sell it back as a modified GMO with a patent. And today what we have is the mining of our thoughts and behaviours, for data. That is why for me, the development discourse today must be about reclaiming autonomy, reclaiming sovereignty."

"Through medicine, physicians acquire economic power and prestige; insurance and pharmaceutical companies accumulate capital. The argument presented in this book is that, where medical pluralism exists, the principal secondary resources for which medicine is a primary resource are social relations and material resources that permit social mobility (Crandon Malamud 1991:ix)."

An Indian epidemiologist and chairman of a national institute epidemiologists of claims that once the virus enters a nation's population it will spread until the nation reaches herd immunity. He said this will be when India overcomes it. He said the sooner it spreads to this extent the better, believes up to 600 million are being infected in India, and that there is no alarm for this. He said lockdown to curtail or eliminate the virus in a major country is a dream. He said the virus has a low mortality rate and that the elderly should be protected while the young get on with their lives, except for curtailing large indoor crowds. We have been saying this since March. Unfortunately, the interviewer wouldn't allow the doctor to speak on treatment in helping most people recover in India. This would have been interesting and is very important.

Here is an interesting review of Selenium and how it may prevent coronavirus from bonding. It is cheap and readily available, but many doctors don't know how its simple properties may work.

We may think that large donors like Bill Gates would be good for the industry, but it can have the opposite effect. Too much coming from one source can control and hinder research, limiting variety. Control locks us into one way of seeing the world and to the program and future vision of one person. It also locks us into the financial wishes of a pharmaceutical industry.

Independence is clearly a huge benefit and must be ensured at all times for the safety of people and for democracy as a whole. Government has this responsibility and has failed seriously in this matter. India is one nation that has resisted this global monopoly more than many other nations and is developing a robust scientific community. I hope that is the direction India takes. We also need an effective inhibitor that will prevent Gates and others like him from bonding to and capturing our institutions.

Previous inventions happened because people resisted the monopolisation of and profiteering from ideas and they often suffered for doing so.

Another economy already being devastated by American hegemony in the Middle East, many of whom are Christian and Muslim, has now been even further devastated by lockdown, with only 33 Covid deaths. Hundreds of thousands can't afford needed meds, almost above the global tally for Covid deaths. Just one country. Madness. And yet these were the people who cared for most Syrian refugees, thrown out by our "war on terror."

We have responded to three crises wrongly:

*New York 9/11 with war on Iraq and a global war on terror, pouring trillions into weapons and global weapons sales.

*Financial Crisis 2008 by printing trillions to build global monopolies, which now have us in their grip.

*Covid 2019 by printing trillions for the financial markets while locking down the global poor.

Hindsight! And yet we still think each time there is a crisis that we are responding to correctly.

Coronavirus: The Truth About Ireland's Nursing Home Deaths (With Dr. Marcus De Brun). Modelling in Ireland completely wrong, no doctors allowed to speak out, nursing homes deliberately opened to the virus, against the policies and plans of the homes themselves. Oxygen was denied, Covid tests were denied to homes, while tests were given to others who didn't need them. Total absence of investigative journalism in Ireland, that is supposed to be democratic, towards the public who pay the TV fees. (Media is not sponsored by Gates and other billionaires.) Not only were the elderly abandoned, but so are the other sick for whom the hospitals and services shut down. Just cervical screening alone: 5% of tests are abnormal, in Ireland this 5% is possibly up to 5,000 people. We have done the opposite of what is needed to save lives in our Covid policies.

State TV taking sponsorship from private interests is a betrayal of their duties to the public.

The issues discussed here about global biodata and restrictions of movement etc are true. These are all being discussed at length at corporate and government levels as coming policies.

BTW, almost all fact-checkers are sponsored by the Gates and other billionaire foundations or by US government agencies. They are not independent. There is an overseeing, certifying body over fact-checkers, that is, guess what, sponsored by the Gates foundation. The Gates foundation also sponsors many media outlets, mainline ones, including the BBC, and runs up multiple millions every year in media representations. This is all contrary to conflict of interests for foundations organising our health policies and the profits that stem from them.

Notes from talk: Philippines basically not in control of Covid 19. They were preoccupied when the disease started. It has spread into densely populated regions. Infection rate is still low, at least according to those they have been able to test. They isolate the vulnerable. Main treatments use hydroxychloroquine and antibiotics for secondary infections. Most people recover quickly, within a few days. Those who were put on ventilators mostly died. Overall very low mortality rate. There seems to be some form of herd immunity in the lower classes. The population has high vitamin D levels from enjoying the outdoor sun. Doesn't like using drugs that bring down the fever too fast, because the fever helps fight the Covid infection. Doctor is politically astute and careful. Doesn't put much hope in a quick vaccine for Covid, says it mightn't be needed, due to herd immunity. Covid isn't that severe. Best to find treatments to cure it than vaccines.

Cost/ benefit analysis, normal holistic leadership. Protecting the vulnerable, not extending any lockdown. Opening the schools is one of the most important things.

Dr. Scott Atlas is the Robert Wesson Senior Fellow at the Hoover Institution, an accomplished physician, and a scholar of public health. For several weeks, Dr. Atlas has been making the case in print and in other media that we as a society have overreacted in imposing draconian restrictions on movement, gatherings, schools, sports, and other activities. He is not a COVID-19 denier—he believes the virus is a real threat and should be managed as such. But, as Dr. Atlas argues, there are some age groups and activities that are subject to very low risk. The one-size-fits-all approach we are currently using is overly authoritarian, inefficient, and not based in science. Dr. Atlas's prescription includes more protection for people in nursing homes, two weeks of strict self-isolation for those with mild symptoms, and most importantly, the opening of all K–12 schools. The latter recommendation is vital for restarting and maintaining the economy so that parents are not housebound trying to work and educate their children. Dr. Atlas is also adamant that an economic shutdown, and all of the attendant issues that go along with it, is a terrible solution—the cure is worse than the disease. Finally, Dr. Atlas reveals some steps he's taken in his own life to try to get things back to normal.

March, April, May, June, we must pay our staff who cannot work due to lockdown, without any Covid deaths in our region. We have had to find $140,000 to cover wages for these months, while those who advocate and manage the lockdown reap the financial rewards. Most people in other employment, or self-employed, just simply haven't been paid at all. This is because the printing of trillions of dollars (as the West's remedy) and the fall in oil has devastated local currency in other nations, wages, savings and pensions. And yet the top priority of the UN Covid relief is abortions, further supporting the financial flow in the "family planning" industry. Debt for the rich is covered by printing trillions, while debt for the others is alleviated only slightly, only temporarily. Meanwhile the money stolen from these nations in tax havens far outweighs the national debt. And yet "the experts" are quiet. Davos says nothing that will help the situation that most effects the hundreds of millions, far beyond anything Covid will ever do. No outcry for a vaccine against this corruption, that is the biggest pandemic, because a Covid vaccine is for the rich and will make lots of money as well.

This video was taken eight years ago. The situation is much worse now. The Covid crisis shows how much government is in the hand of business.

Per head of population, the deaths from Covid in Brazil would need to be 133,343 to equate with the UK as of today's date. Brazilian deaths are now about 50,000. The media's response to Brazil is mostly politicised. How do we respond to the needs, to those with Covid symptoms, to the vulnerable, to the massive number of poor affected economically, to the hunger, to the living conditions that make lockdown oppressive, or to those effected with other illnesses. In a nation like Brazil the needs are huge.

Deaths in Mexico at today's date are 21,825. This death rate for Brazil's population would come to 36,000 deaths. Mexico had nation wide lockdown. Ecuador deaths as today are 4,223. This death rate for Brazil's population would come to 51,000 deaths, as of today. Ecuador had a severe lockdown.

The total Covid deaths worldwide so far are at about 2/3 or a serious flu year according to records.

So much more could be said about this. Almost all the media shows people in relative comfort online during lockdown. Such polices should always be viewed through the lens of those worst effected, not through the lens of those who make the decisions. Consider the many high-rise places. Let the policy makers change positions and lives with the worst affected. It will be a long time until we are allowed to look at the suffering this has caused, for a disease with a relatively low overall death rate.

Foreign business interests and the export of illegal funds to foreign accounts devastate huge swaths of the African continent, When this results in death and malnutrition, instead of repentance, a colonialism of ideology takes over, pushing that killing unborn children is the answer to the hopelessness which is due to global corruption. Colonialism has never stopped, It has just grown worse. Nurture, care, love are the answer, not an ideology of death. Foreign aid almost always has strings attached, and builds market share for the West, even for the "family planning" industry. If we love our children, take the yoke of corruption off their neck, the iron knee, and rebuild local lives and true democracy, that is not dictated to by global monopolies.

This is part one of the series of four videos by the BBC showing the privatisation of Britain and the Western world after WWII. This privatisation has happened in security/ warfare, the economy and even in government, shifting huge sums of the money to the elite, bringing either unemployment or lower wages to others. It has also significantly eroded our democracy and devastated developing nations, bringing an example of corruption to those regions.

This is in Dutch, but it shows how the UN is making abortion the priority in "helping" developing nations through the Covid crisis. This is where "Covid aid" is going. Population eugenics theories aside (which are believed by so many millions of people who have experienced this "aid") the brutality of this system is horrible. Not only have we impoverished hundreds of millions of people, making nutrition impossible for their children, instead of genuinely seeking to restore our communities, we offer killing the babies as the "solution." it's sickening. It also entails false myths about overpopulation, we will show in other posts. We know these are false, partly because we live here. It's really more elitism, ridding ourselves of our "unfortunate costly and embarrassing baggage." Horrible inhumanity.

Learning about the responsible use of herbal resources is an important way of keeping wealth in local community where possible, and not exporting wealth to foreign monopolies for their enrichment. In this case, pharmaceutical companies that unethically and grossly overprice their products while killing off cheaper local products. This overpricing is not necessary for "research" since this is almost all covered by public tax-payer funds. It is just completely unethical patent advantage, corruptly granted by an embedded government. This whole scenario should be illegal. This is keeping local community impoverished, while the same entrepreneurs give philanthropic "support" to these regions, to launder their reputation. At the same time, this support works to expand their market and industrial base. That is, maintaining this "aid" relationship with the world enriches the "givers." The answer instead must be to build local wealth systems, to build nutrition and welfare back into local populations.

A whistle-blower reveals what was going on in a Covid epicentre hospital at New York. Those who detract smear the woman's association with antivax, and dismiss the claims, instead of calling for an independent enquiry. The point is, that when the governor recently enacted full prosecution immunity for hospital staff and nursing homes staff, where most of the people died, and the health system rewards the use of ventilators and other approved drugs and procedures with large sums of money, and the people at risk are minorities and not wealthy, then this equals an opportunity for gross misconduct and corruption. This is always true, and a right response is a genuine independent enquiry, not dismissal. By the way, the woman in question, as far as I can see, is not an antivaxer, but is calling for the rejection of imposed and enforced vaccinations by the government, which I would agree with, no matter our view of vaccinations in general. Enforced vaccinations in a health system that is riddled with conflicts of interest is a very clear recipe for gross corruption and potential harm to large numbers of people, especially in poorer regions. We must balance human rights with the public good. Getting this balance wrong is the problem with so many past societies.

WHO, riddled with conflicts of interests in flu and respiratory vaccines, has, as early as 20 years ago, effectively been privatised and so these private influences have largely taken over our public health policy. As a conflict of interests, this is plainly contrary to principles of non-corruption and safety checks.

Prof Dolores Cahill is a leading global immunologist with years of experience in proteins research and high level lab work in Germany, and has sat on health advisory boards at government level in Germany and Ireland, trying to ensure transparency in the research industry. Her recently expressed views on the Covid 19 crisis have meant she is not welcome on mainstream media. I have checked everything she has said with mainline experts and it all checks out, except one issue she has spoken about: the potential impact of recent flu vaccinations on the vulnerability of older people to Covid. A test on over 6,000 people (posted on this page) shows a reference to coronavirus, because these vaccines have been produced using dog cell lines. Dogs commonly have coronavirus. This could cause immune system storms as a response on an infection with Covid-19, as we are seeing in the worst cases among the elderly in the hot spots of Covid, where the recent flu vaccines have also been used. This is true for Wuhan, Italy, Spain, Britain, New York and Brazil, as well as many other hot spot regions. This is the only thing I have heard Dolores suggest (she is not emphatic on this) that I have not heard other mainline people discuss. My view is it should be independently tested again, especially since a world leading immunologist, who has no personal interest in the matter, is suggesting the possibility. Experts who have no personal interest should not be easily dismissed. She has recently been expelled from one board for her public statements on Covid.

There is growing evidence of “gain of function” research in relation to corona viruses going on in labs for some time. Eventually this was outlawed in America due to the risk of an accidental outbreak and moved to Wuhan. People like Dr Fauci were involved in the backing of this work in the Wuhan lab. There is growing evidence that this virus was accidentally released from the Wuhan laboratory (some of which is posted in this page.) If this is the case, why do we put the people overseeing our systems that brought this upon the world in charge of our recovery? And why do we put one person in charge of a major American health body for 36 years? Shouldn't there rather be a full, open and public enquiry? A lot of documents suggest there should be. Such an enquiry should not be blocked out by non-independent “fact check” assurances. Not for the sake of recriminations, but for the sake of public knowledge and improved public policy. “The research also included gain of function work, which involves manipulating viruses in the lab to explore their potential for infecting humans.” See comment below for Newsweek article. There are many other respected reports on this matter.

The massive corruption which robs trillions from developing nations.

I think we have a general problem with trust, which is a wide-ranging issue, when situations like this are not brought out into public light, law and democratic control. Trillions of dollars sitting in offshore trusts operating secret, non-regulated accounts and shell companies.

Re-administering the way the London and global financial system works would significantly reshape global wellbeing, health, justice and peace, far beyond the way any WHO intervention could dream of doing.

Maybe up to half of the world's offshore wealth is hidden in Britain's offshore jurisdictions. One of the hardest hit regions in this "second British empire" is Africa.

At the end of 2008 sub-Saharan Africa had a net debt to the world of $177 billion (at high interest). But the wealth that had been siphoned off into offshore accounts from these same nations between 1970-2008 is estimated at $944 billion.

The true state of affairs is that sub-Saharan Africa is a net creditor to the rest of the world. Its hundreds of millions of people dying without health care and zero personal funds that are subsidizing this. They are the real owners from whom this money has been stolen, and more money still is being stolen from them. The thing is that no one cares or does anything about this and we have our stupid aid programs in response, a lot of which also would go back to the tax havens and be recirculated in the wealth economy.

It is impossible to tell the difference between legal and illegal money in these tax havens, or prevent the money being washed and re-entering society in shell companies.

But all this is done while rich nations lecture Africa.

Developing countries have tried to change this at the UN but America and Britain have blocked it. They have refused to allow international standards for the collection of tax in nations of economic activity. This is killing millions of people every year it goes on.

This is why sub-Saharan Africa has not developed.

And this creates terrorism. If the poverty isn't enough, now we have to die in terrorism as well. And how do terrorists get their funds? Through the same secret networks of shell companies. How is it that people who would not allow this to happen in their own country, to their own children, allow this to go on in other nations?

Worldwide developing countries lose over $1 trillion every year, most of which flows into western nations like the US and Britain, keeping their currencies strong.

But this is also leading to the "financialization" of the US and British economies, or their de-industrialisation. That is, the process is slowly killing the American and British futures for their children.

Today, billionaire corporations that have become rich by evading taxes are now directing public policy in our nations to make even more money.

The privatisation of contracts in the west means that firms can borrow money from offshore companies at high interest rates, so that they don't make profits or pay taxes at home, and other such practices.

There is an interchange between government personal and personal in accounting firms that advise corporations on their tax. It's like the government itself has been privatised, and works in the interests of these corporations.

The research of Prof Karl Friston, a world-renowned computer modelling expert, agrees with Dolores Cahill, finding that lockdown isn't significant when comparing this Covid crisis in nations such as Britain and Sweden. Dolores said differences arise due to factors such as, already existing immunity to past coronaviruses in the population, general immune capabilities of populations, or even genetic differences that make people unsusceptible to the virus. Friston believes that the unsusceptible population in Britain could be as high as 80%. In Eastern, Western and Southern Africa, apart from the young age of people and warmer conditions, there is a yet untested theory that coronaviruses may already exist in the region, providing more immunity. Or it could even be malaria treatments already in the population. This is how hydroxychloroquine was discovered as a treatment for Covid in China. They noticed that people with lupus were not becoming seriously ill with Covid and then found it was because they were being treated with hydroxychloroquine. Modelling that doesn't allow for these factors will be wrong. Freston claimed models should consider factors like normal human behaviour in isolating themselves when sick. If not, models will give hyped predictions of deaths. Prof Karl Freston, building more reliable models.

UK HCID (department of High Consequence Infectious Diseases) declassified COVID-19 as a high consequence infectious disease back on March 19. They said it is no longer considered a high consequence infectious disease. This was due to the fact the number of cases was much higher than originally thought, dramatically reducing its mortality rate. I have heard several scientists saying this, who haven't been allowed on mainstream media and have been censored by fact-checkers and YouTube, etc. Why hasn't the media or even the politicians told us about this declassification? So, why the lockdown these last two and a half months that has ruined so many lives?

This is about the Lancet study into hydroxychloroquine. In my view this drug has been highly politicised for many reasons, One, because Trump took the drug; two because it wasn't approved by a Western study; three because of its cheap price (those approving drugs have financial interests in drug companies - other posts on this page show the details); four because of current political and economic battles (propaganda) over China, which has approved many treatments for Covid, and used them successfully, but we say their numbers are wrong. Early China treatments, looking through their hospital reports (shown on this page) reveal their holistic treatments. They use both traditional medical and local knowledge in treating each patient according to that patient's individual needs/response, not entangled in a "one size fits all" regiment from a central authority, like many doctors have been subjected to in the West (articles on this page show this also.) Some treatments in China include: Vitamins, especially D and intravenous vitamin C, hydroxychloroquine, zinc, antibiotics, steroids, blood thinners, oxygen, a variety of Chinese traditional treatments and much more. China allowed an openness to treatments and clinical trials as needs arose in patient care. Tests done in the West in vitamin C were oral only, which have been used to debunk the use of such vitamins. But the issue is not oral vitamin C, but high dosage intravenous vitamin C, which this page shows has been used successfully. Lancet is one of the most prestigious journals in the world. Its study on hydroxychloroquine was filled with corrupt data. The fact that this study passed a rigorous review before being published is unbelievable. A quick glance is enough to show the corruption. The fact that WHO took this paper without any due-diligence and used it to suppress all further studies into hydroxychloroquine is clearly an abuse of due-independent process.

Oxford University: an interview with a leading theoretical epidemiologist. Summary of her comments.

Mortality rate of covid-19 much lower than incorrect models stated.

Infection had probably already spread through many communities before lockdown. This needs to be tested but isn't sufficiently, which is why policy for response is failing. Antibodies for the virus exist in blood samples from before the pandemic was thought to be in the UK.

UK government made the wrong decision, when considering the overall costs of lockdown.

Total number of deaths needs to be compared to other years, say from the flu epidemics, so we have context. If a new virus kills not much more than an endemic flu, then it is not likely to pose a great problem going forward. Data shows this Covid is no more dangerous than influenza.

Over half the population have probably already been infected and have immunity. Thus social distancing/lockdown is irrelevant and doing more harm to people than good.

In fact lockdown decreases our immunity and makes us more vulnerable to infection from this and other conditions. This would leave us as vulnerable as the world was at the time of the Spanish Flu. Lockdown creates the conditions for future waves. To think of social distancing as a new normal will risk our populations in the future. We could then have a "proper pandemic" like 1918.

Advising the vulnerable section of the population is the key. UK has not done this due to underfunding.

If you succeed so much that the virus goes away, we remain at higher risk if it later comes back. Rather you want it staying in the population spreading immunity. Other past corona viruses probably provided more immunity in some populations.

Vaccine is not required to open society but could be helpful in protecting the vulnerable.

"The data show that the relative strictness of a country's containment measures had little bearing... what the past few months suggest is that the economic cost is not the only downside to a draconian lockdown. The Covid-19 experience has taught us that it's far better to respond quickly and smartly, with the right technology and mass testing and tracing, rather than only relying on the crudest of shutdowns. If there are second waves of the virus, we shouldn't repeat the mistakes of the first."

German Velasquez (a former director in WHO) is Special Adviser on Health and Development at the South Centre in Geneva. "The basic starting point for any reform of WHO should be to focus on how to regain the public and multilateral character of the institution. The choice before the WHO member countries is clear: opt for a PPP (public-private partnerships) to manage projects funded by philanthropic foundations and the private sector (pharmaceutical corporations), or rebuild a public international agency that can independently steer the health sector." Our whole economic and political process has this choice to now make: rebuild a fair, regulated economy to ensure fair prices are paid for local resources and labour, or break down the democratic processes of our societies and further instil an economics of theft. It's the same with the United Nation, in that what was formerly a public body is being bought off increasingly by the private sector and its policies. This is dangerous in terms of local democracy.

Meanwhile in India. Published on 30 May 2020. Council of Scientific and Industrial Research (CSIR), Director General Shekhar Mande said that WHO decision to halt trials of hydroxychloroquine for COVID-19 is not correct and it must resume as early as possible. And he said the Lancet study is faulty. Hydroxychloroquine reaffirmed today by government to be given to health workers, home visitors for testing and police as protection against infection. Very low death rate among health workers, despite very poor PPE. Death rate in India estimated in as massively low, due to infection rate in population being millions above what was thought. Expert says partly due to young age average of Indian population and to early treatment of patients. He also says asymptomatic infected people may not be as infectious as originally thought, which means isolation may not be required unless symptoms are showing. See comments for more...

Nobel Prize winner Dr Scott Atlas speaks on herd immunity, stopping the isolation, and noted that widespread testing and contact tracing at this stage are not required to open the economy. Testing is required at nursing homes, for some medical personal and for people who come to hospitals presenting with respiratory symptoms.

Lockdown and censorship. A lot of different ways of looking at this, especially when the data doesn't seem to match ongoing policies. People grappling with possible reasons, knowing there are pitfalls and costs circulating around various attitudes and views.

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=tfXqbIPMgxU&fbclid=IwARo9OFUvTQzNw6ANstZ41fgibcPFRez5CE\_kquXMtuqJ\_JXK80-ssMxrreM&app=desktop

Another example of censorship by YouTube and others, taking down highly qualified doctors with very significant medical facilities, just because their views differ. And we are fine with this kind of censorship? Censorship of this kind can do more harm to our societies. This virus has revealed the state of our societies in this way, our propensity to censorship, not herd immunity, but herd control. In my opinion, the US is in a serious state now, for many reasons, like the repeated killings of black citizens, the overuse of power by authorities, the buying of the political process by wealth and industry. This combination always impacts on the poor and powerless most and this wealth gap is growing. It's a long way from a democratic model and we ought to be concerned. By the way, what has been banned in this video makes a lot of sense to me as science.

On a possible link between the flu vaccine and Covid-19. Greg Wolf conducted a controlled study with approx 6,000 patients from the US armed forces, and found the flu “vaccine derived virus interference was significantly associated with coronavirus and human metapneumovirus.” This could lead to a cytokine storm immune response to Coronavirus. He did this study in 2017-18, before the current Coronavirus outbreak, so there is no bias related to the current crisis. Fact checks on the internet do not interact sufficiently with this data to disprove it. Flu vaccines in question (when confirming or disputing this study) are those developed from virus grown in cell culture of a line of dog cells which are likely to contain Coronavirus proteins. This kind of vaccine can be manufactured more quickly than the older forms of flu vaccine made utilising chicken eggs. It was this “dog protein” vaccine which was prevalent in Wuhan, Italy, UK, Europe and New York prior to and during the current Coronavirus outbreak. The flu vaccine has also been prevalent in Brazil during this present pandemic (though I haven't confirmed that the Brazil flu vaccine was the same kind used in the other nations mentioned.) This “dog protein” flu vaccine is being used in this 2019-20 season. (See my comment below.) These things need to be discussed honestly on media, not brushed aside with an “approved response,” especially when a preminent immunologist is speaking about it.

On the Covid-19 virus coming from a Wuhan lab. A number of articles suggesting the covid 2 came from the Wuhan lab. This wouldn't be surprising because this kind of work in labs is well known to take place, for a number of reasons associated with research. I guess the problem is that this mistaken outbreak would be politicised in very unhelpful and unnecessary ways.

Dr Didier Raoult is a foremost expert in his field with years of research, thousands of papers and years of clinical experience in infectious diseases. He runs a large hospital in France and has extensive experience in field treatment and research through Africa. When he saw the effectiveness of hydroxychloroquine for Covid in China he started using it with good results for thousands of patients in France. It was also adopted in Senegal very successfully, where Didier also works.

Covid test kits. It seems one reason why the UK locked down was because it was unable to test for Covid-19. But this inability to test contributed to the death of many vulnerable. Senegal developed a cheap fast test (10 minutes) at $1 each. It worked and this was the main reason Senegal had such success in quickly overcoming Covid. They made excess tests for other nations. The USA privatised its testing, at very large costs in comparison. The UK even sent some of its tests to the US for processing. Once the tests arrive in the US they still take hours or days to process. Hardly fast. Hardly cheap. One English company has decided to buck the norm. If we want to profit from this "we only prolong this pandemic" they decided. They have decided to partner with Senegal. See comment below on expensive patented tests.

Virus probably swept through before lockdown. Can't measure R a reliable indicator of policy. We shouldn't be in this costly lockdown. The roots of our mistaken response go a long way back. "People outdoors is better for our public health." • "Remaining in a state of lockdown is extremely dangerous" • "We used to live in a state approximating lockdown 100 years ago, and that was what created the conditions for the Spanish Flu to come in and kill 50m people." • "The truth is that lockdown is a luxury, and it's a luxury that the middle classes are enjoying and higher income countries are enjoying at the expense of the poor, the vulnerable and less developed countries... to think only in terms of "is this epidemic over or not?" (for us to come out of lockdown), I think, is unconscionable.

He said the Redesivir drug is highly toxic and has no place in the treatment of Covid. See comment in this post below for his explanation. Professor Karol Sikora: fear is more deadly than the virus, a former director in WHO.

Summary below from Lockdown TV.

Freddie Sayers interviews Professor Karol Sikora, the Founding Dean and Professor of Medicine at the University of Buckingham Medical School and an ex-director of the WHO Cancer Programme. Read the full accompanying article here:

<https://unherd.com/the-post/professor-...>

Professor Karol Sikora has become something of a celebrity in the UK over the past months for his expert commentary on the pandemic, and his unusual tendency for optimism rather than pessimism.

Virus 'getting tired'

- In the past two weeks, the virus is showing signs of petering out
- It's as though the virus is 'getting tired', almost 'getting bored'
- It's happening across the world at the same time

Existing herd immunity

- The serology results around the world (and forthcoming in Britain) don't necessarily reveal the percentage of people who have had the disease
- He estimates 25-30% of the UK population has had Covid-19, and higher in the group that is most susceptible
- Pockets of herd immunity help *already* explain the downturn
- Sweden's end result will not be different to ours - lockdown versus no lockdown

Fear more deadly than the virus

- When the history books are written, the fear will have killed many more people than the virus, including large numbers of cancer and cardiological patients not being treated
- We should have got the machinery of the NHS for non-corona patients back open earlier

Masks and schools

- Evidence on masks is just not there either way so it should be an 'individual decision'

- We should move to 1m social distancing which means restaurants and bars could reopen

- More schools should reopen in June as 'children are not the transmitters of this virus'

- We should be getting back to the 'old normal' not a 'new normal'

A New Zealand epidemiologist explains that lockdown does not reduce deaths. Considering the harm that comes from lockdown he says work and schools should open.

My question is why are we ruled by fear? When did we start thinking we should live forever?

It's time to open and rescue the livelihood of others.

US and UK 'lead push against global patent pool for Covid-19 drugs'

To me, this is one of the most important environmental and community development matters we face. It brings many things together:

- The raping by the monopolies of our environment, often in the name of charity.
- The truth about our education systems that follow monopoly sponsorship.
- The truth about agriculture.
- The truth about developing local and rural community.
- The cause of much of our violence.
- The failure of government to protect us, instead taking money from big business.
- The truth about carbon dioxide in the atmosphere and the number one way it can be handled.

Another WHO boss not listened to. Have been saying this for over a month. Economics is life and death also for many people. Live with corona until its batteries wear down. It's not going away just because we shut down.

Higher infection rate than thought (lower death rate), virus transferred more in certain environments, societies overcome it by learning to live with it.

Freddie Sayers talks to Professor Hendrik Streeck about why he thinks lockdown measures were initiated too quickly, and how his findings show a Covid-19 fatality rate of 0.24-0.36%.

The deadliness of Covid-19, measured by the “Infected Fatality Rate” or what percentage of infected people end up dying, has become an issue of global significance.

At UnHerd, we've spoken to experts at both ends of the range of estimates, from Neil Ferguson (who believes the IFR to be just under 1%, perhaps 0.8-0.9%) to Johan Giesecke who maintains that it is nearer 0.1%, or one in a thousand.

This may sound like splitting hairs — they are both under one percent after all — but in reality, the difference between these estimates changes everything. At the lower end, a much more laissez-faire policy becomes possible, and at 30,000 deaths it starts to look like the UK has already been through the worst of it; at the higher end, a policy of continued ultra-caution is necessary because a more relaxed approach could mean hundreds of thousands of additional deaths.

This study shows not just the wealth of the top 1% but also the much larger extend of their total global economic control and network of web interlinks they share. This means that a conflict of interest virtually always exists in philanthropy and links with government bodies meant to be serving the public good. See comment below.
